Finnish Anthropological Society (SAS)

The Biennial Conference of the Finnish Anthropological Society “Entangled Mobilities” (22th–23th of May 2017, University of Jyväskylä) explores different kinds of mobilities and their interconnections. Over 90 presentations of the conference discuss, among other themes, the refugee crises, relationships between actors of mobility, artifacts and technologies of mobility as well as the movement of ideas and structures. Keynote speakers are Purnima Mankekar (University of California) and Hans Lucht (Danish Institute for International Studies). Film programme of the conference includes award winning ethnographic films: Mauro Bucci’s Hotel Splendid, Gabriele Cipolla’s Echoes, Fabiana Duarte’s Island and Isabelle Ingold’s Highway Rest Stop.

The latest installment of the Journal of the Finnish Anthropological Society is dedicated to the study of ritual in plural societies. The special issue titled ‘Ritual Intimacy - Ritual Publicity: Engaging with plurality’ includes an introduction by Joel Robbins and Johanna Sumiala, five research articles, an afterword by André Iteanu, and an interview with Maurice Bloch. Read it online: journal.fi/suomenantropologi

Suomen Antropologi - Journal of the Finnish Anthropological Society is a peer-reviewed open access publication which accepts scholarly articles, review articles, research reports, critical essays, conference reports, book reviews, and news and information in the field of anthropology and related studies.

American Anthropological Association (AAA)

The World Anthropologies Section of American Anthropologist invites 1500-2000 word essays on anthropological training abroad (including when or at what age or stage, why, where, and even how this happens or has happened), and what has happened when returning to work in anthropology at "home."

The Associate Editor and Editorial Assistant of the World Anthropologies Section of AA have noticed that many of the contributors so far to this Section have received at least part of their training in the U.S. That could be because these colleagues feel more comfortable writing in English than many other colleagues (though this Section makes a point of accepting manuscripts in other languages and undertaking their translation into English) or because they value AA as a publishing venue as a result of training in the U.S. But we want to open up this discussion more because we think it is complex, because we suspect that there are many aspects to this complexity, and because we know that it intersects with questions about whether there is still a hegemonic anthropology (or there are still hegemonic centers of anthropology).

We would like to get these essays by September 1, 2017, so that they could be assessed for inclusion in a 2018 issue of AA and, if chosen, copyedited in time for such an issue.

We would, however, like to know by May 31 if you are contemplating writing such an essay, what its topic or message would be, and what language you imagine you will use in writing it and submitting it. You could send us an email with that information, or even just an email with a 100-200 word Abstract. Best email addresses for us are: dominguezvr@gmail.com and emilymetzner@gmail.com

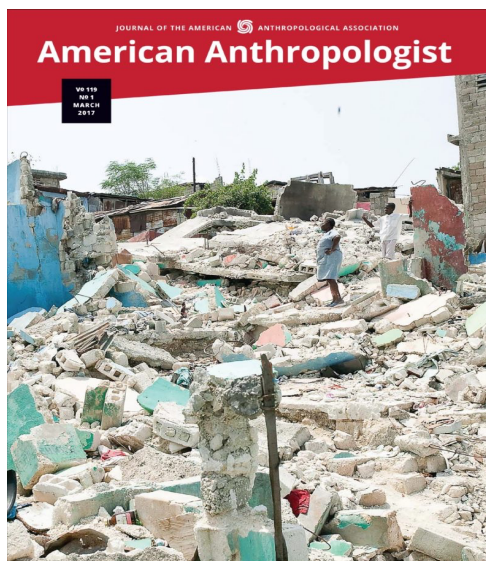

Colleagues in any and all fields and subfields of anthropology are welcome to submit, and these essays can be in whatever language the potential contributor wants to use. We will undertake any needed translation.

The American Anthropological Association has been busy advocating on behalf of the field and social science in general. In just the first three months of 2017 AAA has condemned legislation aimed at closing Central European University in Hungary, slammed President Trump's Reversal on Climate Policy, called for the immediate reversal of the US administration's executive order banning immigrants, and reaffirmed its commitment to academic freedom by endorsing the American Association of University Professors' Statement of Principles on Academic Freedom and Tenure. The association has also been busy promoting anthropology and social science on Capitol Hill in Washington, DC, paying visits to US congressional representatives from Indiana, Michigan and Arizona (including Senators Jeff Flake and John McCain). Advocacy will also be front and center when AAA hosts its 2017 Annual Meeting in DC November 29th - December 3rd.

Attend the American Anthropological Association's 116th Annual Meeting in Washington, DC! The 2017 Annual Meeting, held November 29th through December 3rd, will focus on why Anthropology Matters! With more than 750 sensational sessions, the Annual Meeting will surely provide unique opportunities to connect, collaborate, and contribute to the advancement of anthropology. Learn more at www.americananthro.org/meetings.

American Anthropologist, the AAA's flagship journal, has a new look and its own website (americananthropologist.org) under the editorship of Deborah A. Thomas, University of Pennsylvania. The website will promote the peer-reviewed content of the journal to a global audience and offer original, open access digital content, including photo essays, interviews, podcasts, and curated online discussions around timely topics. The managing editor of American Anthropologist, Sean Mallin, will work closely with a team of contributing editors to bring diverse perspectives and ideas to the website while maintaining the high standards of the journal.

PARTNERSHIPS WITH OTHER ENTITIES

APA has established bilateral partnerships with other institutions in order to give its members some benefits, namely: greater visibility of APA and its members' activities, discounts on book purchases and reduction in the registration fees in conferences. To date, partnerships have been established with:

- Imprensa de Ciências Sociais and Institute of Social Sciences of the University of Lisbon (ICS-ULisboa): 30% discount on the acquisition of this publisher's books, dissemination of partner's news and shared activities;
- Center for Research in Anthropology (CRIA): dissemination of partner's news and activities;
- Brazilian Association of Anthropology (ABA): equal registration fee for effective members of ABA and APA in the periodic conferences organized by both institutions;
- Portuguese Association of Sociology (APS): 20% discount for APS and APA members in the general registration fee at periodic congresses organized by both institutions;
- Federación de Asociaciones de Antropología del Estado Español (FAAEE): equal registration fee for FAAEE and APA members in the periodic congresses of both institutions.

APA RELEASES THE DEFINITIVE RESULTS OF THE STUDY ON "THE PROFILE OF ANTHROPOLOGISTS IN PORTUGAL"

As it was urgent to account for what anthropologists do in Portugal, both in terms of academic training and research, as well as in professional terms, the Portuguese Anthropological Association (APA) has just released the definitive results(*) of a comprehensive study on "The Profile of Anthropologists in Portugal".

This study, developed by a team of 14 researchers between 2014-2016, involved a detailed questionnaire on all the professional, formative and research aspects of the national anthropological community, as well as a set of qualitative interviews for a more detailed survey about the expectations and concerns in our scientific area and also the production of a video documentary.

The study was based on a survey already conducted in 1999 for data comparison and it still has a long way ahead for updates, a responsibility that should be taken by APA and its recently re-elected board of directors, concerning the improvement of the visibility, employability and impact of anthropology in the contemporary world.

APA HOSTS EASA CONFERENCE ON “BODIES IN TRANSITION: POWER, KNOWLEDGE AND MEDICAL ANTHROPOLOGY

EASA Medical Anthropology Network | 2017 Biannual Conference Network Meeting
5-7 July, Lisbon, Portugal
Local organization: Portuguese Anthropological Association (APA)
Venue: University of Lisbon, Institute of Social Sciences (Av. Prof. Aníbal Bettencourt, 9)

In 2017 the Biannual Conference of EASA Medical Anthropology Network will be hosted in Lisbon, Portugal, with the prospect of promoting a compact encounter with more plenaries and less parallel sessions. The purpose is to maximize the interweaving of our experiences and understandings across the different niches and orientations within medical anthropology and in exchange with neighboring fields; we hope that bringing back plenary sessions creates room for unpredicted synergies. Around 120 medical anthropologists from around the globe will meet at the University of Lisbon to debate current research and developments and discuss the field's contribution to gain a broader and deepened understanding of the conference's overarching topic.

Association of Social Anthropologists of Aotearoa/New Zealand (ASAANZ)

2017 Conference Call for Panels

This year's conference, Shifting States, is a joint ASAANZ/ASA/AAS conference that will be held at the University of Adelaide from 11-15 December. <http://shiftingstates.info/home>

This conference aims to extend recent anthropological theorising on the state. Anthropology has long been interested in the comparative study of states, and from the mid-twentieth century onwards, at least, anthropologists have provided rich ethnographic accounts of, and key theoretical insights into, states as institutional and bureaucratic formations, as purveyors of nationalist sentiment (especially in post-colonial settings), and as custodians of public ritual. However, in recent years, a growing body of anthropological work has extended these definitions further still, by drawing attention to the ways in which 'statecraft' may be embedded within wider sets of relations, representations, and practices as well.

The conference call for panels is now open. The conference convenors welcome contributions from anthropologists and researchers, including academics, practitioners and students engaging with ethnographic and anthropological research and analysis. <http://shiftingstates.info/cfpan>

The deadline for proposals is 10 May 2017.
